Nobody builds well-being alone. And even strong families need strong support systems. That’s why for 120 years, Children's Bureau of Southern California has been strengthening at-risk families and communities so that children can thrive, free from maltreatment and other forms of adversity. Our programs provide families with the resources necessary to ensure stable relationships, physical and emotional health, and economic security. We can’t do this alone and invite you to partner with us in building hope.
